BRAND IDENTITY & USAGE

The Brand identity is the face of our Brand and represents the values and aspirations of Frido and its audiences.

This section contains all the guidelines required for the fair usage of the Frido Brand identity. It is essential to follow the following guidelines to maintain consistency in all the communication for better Brand integrity and recall.

Identity marks

These are the different identity marks that can be used in the logo. The stacked identity must be used for maximum communication. The linear identity can be used where the communication format is horizontal and restricts visibility with the stacked version of the identity.

Linear Version Proportions

The Frido identity has been designed to follow a system of proportions. The grid unit ‘X’ is the height of the letter ‘o’ in the logotype. To protect the presence and strength of the Frido visual identity and trademark, the identity should never be redrawn or altered in any way. The linear version should be used only where the format height is restricted, for example website header.

Linear Version Safe Space

Safe space refers to the minimum clearance space, which must always surround all sides of the identity to ensure its prominence and clarity. In general, a larger amount of visually uninterrupted space should be kept clear for optimal visibility and no other text or imagery must be placed within the safe space. It is essential that the Frido identity remains free of all graphics, messaging, identities and imagery. The identity has a safe space of the height of the letter ‘T’ in the logotype.

linear version minimum size

To ensure quality reproduction in print, the Frido linear identity should appear no smaller than 1 cm in height, and the identity with brand mark should appear no smaller than 1.5 cm in height.

In digital applications, the Frido identity should appear no smaller than 28px in height for the independent identity unit, and 43px in height for the identity with brand mark.

Symbol

The Frido Symbol should be used sparingly to reinforce the Brand identity where required, and for direct impact on customer experience. Shown here are the proportions, safe space usage and minimum permissible size of the Brand mnemonic.

The symbol should appear no smaller than 1.5 cm in print in height. In digital applications, the Frido identity should appear no smaller than 43px in height The Full colour version is preferred for communication.
The Grayscale colour version should be used where production limits use of colour. Both versions may also be used against dark backgrounds.

Identity Rules

Shown here are just a few examples of what “not to do” with the Frido identity. The identity usage should be treated with care. Only the final artwork identity files from the Brand custodian must be used. The indicated rules apply to all variations of the Frido identity.

Colour Variations

In certain situations, the logo can also be used on a white or contextually colored background, as long as there is a 3:1 contrast ratio. Anything less may compromise visibility and is not recommended. Color contrasts can be checked here : https://webaim.org/resources/contrastchecker/

Thumbnail Mark

Compressed mark used for small scale and where applicable.

Monocolor

The Full colour version is preferred for maximum communication. The Grayscale versions should be used where production limits use of colour. Both full-colour and grayscale versions may also be used against dark backgrounds, as shown. The Identity may only be reproduced in the variations listed.

COLOR AND TYPOGRAPHY

Color and typography are the personality of a Brand and represent the character and personality of Frido and its audiences.

This section contains all the guidelines required for the fair usage of the Frido color palatte and typography. It is essential to follow the following guidelines to maintain consistency in all the communication for better Brand integrity.

Primary Colour Palette

The core palette will cover majority of your needs.
It’s intentionally small in variety so as to not dilute the brand visuals, which adds confusion.

#F08224

M: 60
Y: 100
K: 0

Pantone: 158 C

Secondary Colour Palette

The secondary palette supports the primary Brand palette in Brand communication. Accents can be used to add interest to brand imagery such as illustrations and to specific brand touchpoints, for example dashboard bars in the Product User Interface.

The colours, when represented must match exactly in values to the palette provided here.

Extended Colour Palette

The Frido extended palette combines bold and bright colours to represent the young, confident yet caring user base.

Shown here are sequential variations of the Primary Brand Palette, which can be used for applications where the complete communication format/ screen requires representation in one or at most two colour sets.

The colours, when represented must match exactly in values to the palette provided here.

Brand Colour Ratio

The colour palette should be used in ideal proportion for Brand communication.

Primary brand colour:
#F08224 - 60%

Secondary colours:
#1B9AAA - 20%
#D8FFF8 - 10%
#1E1E1E - 10%

Type variations

1. Line height and stacking:

   Text is centre aligned when used as standalone content.

2. Give white space:

   Enough white space is given to text to allow text to breathe.

3. Text next to key visual:

   visual and text working together to create a strong visual.

4. Text used in a story:

   Creates a dynamic layout.

Line heights and rules

For headline:

For headlines, line height of 100% should be followed to give a compact yet legible feel.
However, sometimes line height should be increased to give the text more readbility.

1. Ultra headline - short copy
   ASAP semibold | 100% line height

2. Ultra headline - longer copy
   ASAP semibold | 100% line height

3. Primary headline - short copy
   Hind medium | 120% line height

4. Primary headline - longer copy
   Hind semibold | 120% line height

Imagery

Images are key factor in visual representation of Frido’s brand. There are a few points which should be followed in order to convince the user about the product effectively.

This section contains all the guidelines required for the fair usage of the imagery. It is essential to follow the following guidelines to maintain consistency in all the communication

Imagery - Website and Social Media

For images used on website or social media, the user base needs to be in focus. Hence, the people in the images should be young, active (performing a task), confident (looking directly into the camera).

The colours of images are very contemporary and urban backgrounds make users relate to them.

Imagery - Product Images

Images with solid background and person or just the mask in front are better to be limited to product information images; as they are set-up and showcase the product features clearly.

05

Iconography

Icons used in the app/website as well as on social media should sync well with the brand’s indentity.

This section contains all the guidelines required for the fair usage of the Frido iconophy. It is essential to follow the following guidelines to maintain consistency in all the communication for better Brand integrity.

Iconography

The icon grid establishes clear rules for the consistent, but flexible, positioning of graphic elements.

Keyline shapes are the foundation of the grid. By using these core shapes as guidelines, you can maintain consistent visual proportions across system icons.
